THE FATE OF ODESSA IS STILL IN DOUBT

Red Flag Floats in Front of Strike-Ridden City After Bombardment.

ALL RUSSIA AGHAST AT AWFUL TURN OF AFFAIRS IN THE EMPIRE

1000 Mutinous Sailors and Troops Have Been Fight- ing Since Tuesday.

Lithuan, June 30.—A strong force of infantry, reinforced by machine guns, is besieging four thousand mutinous sailors from Port Alexander III., who are in a small wood near the port.

The fight has been in progress for some time and the outcome is unknown.

The mutiny started Tuesday night, when the sailors revolted against the government, seized the stores and secured arms and ammunition. The troops then attacked the mutinous sailors, who were driven back in the woods and surrounded.

TEMPORARILY IN CHECK.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The government has received word from Odessa that the military has succeeded in getting the upper hand over the strikers. The authorities express fear, however, that rioting will be renewed at any moment.

QUIET AT ODESSA.

Odessa, June 30.—There is a temporary lull in the rioting, and the city is quiet at present. The strikers are not overawed, but are only cowed for the moment by the presence of a large number of troops armed with machine guns.

The bombardment last night by the Kotlov Potemkin did little damage to the city. Few shots were fired, and two buildings were struck by the shells.

The warship still has its guns pointed toward the city as a constant menace.

Formal notice was served today on the commandant of the troops that if there is a renewal of the massacre of people by the soldiers the bombardment will be renewed and continued until the soldiers are driven from the city.

Official Report at Washington.
Washington, June 30.—Ambassador Meyer, of St. Petersburg, sends the following report of the situation at Odessa: "Six officers of the Potemkin were killed, eight injured, and the remainder are prisoners. The fleet has not arrived at Odessa harbor, which is largely destroyed by fire. Many Russian steamers were burned."

Strike at Kishinev.
Bucharest, June 30.—A message from Kishinev says that a general strike has been declared there. Cossacks have seized the place, and General Grebenitski, chief of the Russian gendarmerie was assassinated yesterday.

300 Killed in Lithuan.
St. Petersburg, June 30.—A telegram from Lithuan says that up to last night three hundred casualties had occurred in the fighting between troops and mutinous sailors. A large number of the mutineers have been arrested.

Russian Battleship Hauled.
Tokio, June 30.—The Russian battleship Presvet, sunk at Port Arthur, has been successfully hauled by the Japanese engineers.

Emperor Declares State of War.
St. Petersburg, June 30.—The emperor has issued the following ukase addressed to the ruling senate:

"In order to guarantee public safety and to terminate the disorder at Odessa and district and to invest the commander of the troops in the military district of Odessa with the rights of civil administration for the defense of order and public tranquillity."

Another Rebel Warship.
London, June 30.—The Express prints the following dispatch from Odessa, timed midnight:

"A second mutinous warship is reported at Cape Pontopino, ten miles from here."

"At seven o'clock the rebel warship steamed two miles off, but shortly afterwards returned to its former anchorage and fired several shots at the sunken Langeron, where there is a detachment of Cossacks."

Fired On the City.
London, June 30.—The Mail this morning prints the following from the Odessa correspondent, timed 10:10 Thursday night:

"Using full charges, the Kotlov Potemkin opened fire on the city this evening. The first shell struck

DESPERATE NEGRO SHOT AT A DANCE

Quarrel Over a Dog Caused the Tragedy About Midnight.

Cato Strow, alias Greer, Was Caught, But Executed by Coroner's Jury.

HE WAS THEN RELEASED

Cato Strow, alias Greer, colored, shot and instantly killed Walter Hughes, colored, near the Red Stimm dance hall on Mill street in Mechanicsburg last night about 11:30 o'clock, the shooting being done in self-defense, it is said, and resulting from a quarrel over a dog.

Eye witnesses to the shooting claim that Strow and Hughes were talking about a small dog, which Hughes claimed wanted to bite him. Strow alleged that the dog would not bite and was only playing and finally after a few minutes discussion Hughes became enraged and started towards Strow with a knife. Strow grabbed a fence paling and struck Hughes. The paling broke and still Hughes advanced.

Strow then pulled his pistol and began to fire, shooting five times, one bullet penetrating the head. Hughes fell dead and Strow secured his hat which had fallen off in the fight, and left.

The shooting occurred just outside the city limits and Strow had fled when the police arrived. The body of the dead negro was brought to the Nance & Pad undertaking establishment in the patrol wagon and all the witnesses possible to secure summoned to appear and answer questions in the coroner's inquest.

The fight did not seem to have any effect on the dancers, the dance going on just the same after the corpse had been removed as before.

Hughes lived on Hunslands street and was employed at one of the brick yards while Strow is a mill worker residing in Mechanicsburg. Strow is under size, while Hughes was a full grown and powerful man.

Prior to the inquest this morning officers Clark and Brennan, of the Mechanicsburg beat, went out back of the Brooks' farm on the Calvert City road where Strow's father lived, thinking he had gone home. Officer Brennan remained behind and Officer Clark went to the house to find that father and son had left for town to surrender. Officer Brennan met the two as they came into "Cannon" and took them to the jail.

Coroner James Crow this morning at 10 o'clock held an inquest over the body and the jury returned a verdict exonerating Strow. The verdict was as follows:

We, the jury, after being duly sworn, viewed the body of Walter Hughes, lying before us, came to his death by pistol shots fired by Cato Strow. We, the jury, find that Cato Strow acted in self-defense.

(Signed) Joe P. Homan, James McNeill, J. W. Budron, A. W. Townsend, J. M. Clark, W. A. Wickliffe.

The dead man is understood to have relatives in Nashville, and they have been notified of his death if they do not instruct Coroner Crow what to do the remains will be buried in the county graveyard this afternoon.

It is no use agonizing in prayer for the light when you keep the shutters locked.

DIED OF TYPHOID.

L. C. Emphre died in Hospital last night.

R. E. Walsh, aged 22, a telegraph operator employed at Marion, Ky., by the L. C., died in the local railroad hospital this morning at 2:30 o'clock of typhoid fever after an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Walsh was taken ill at Marion and became so serious that he was brought here for treatment. He was admitted June 6, and grew worse gradually until this morning death relieved his sufferings.

Little is known of his people, the nearest known relative, a grand mother, residing in Oconto, Wis. She has been telegraphed of the death. The remains will be held here pending word from the grandmother.

Treasurer's Office Moved.

The office of L. A. Faulhaber, treasurer of the Tennessee Central railroad, will be removed to St. Louis July 1. The change is made to accommodate Mr. Faulhaber who has been elected vice-president and treasurer of the Appalachian and Northern railroad company.

A One-Sided Argument.

You can't dispute what we say about the value of saving until you try it. And we wonder why you do not try it. After you start your account, if you decide you can't keep it up, drop it.

The peculiar thing about it is that you receive exactly as much when you close your account as when you started it. It costs nothing to try and your money does not depreciate. On the other hand it actually increases if it stays here a year or six months. We pay 4 per cent. compound interest. One dollar will start an account.

Paducah Takes Another.

Henderson, June 30.—Tough luck held the Hens in its grasp again yesterday and despite the fact that they outdid the Indians the second game of the series was won by that team in an easy manner. Morgan, for the local bunch, started the proceedings, but he was pounded to all corners of the lot at an early stage of the game and he was blanketed and returned to his stall. "Big Bill" Asher, jumped in the box and puzzled the visiting batters for the remainder of the game, allowing them but a couple of hits. "Dick" Brahe was on the firing line for the Scalp Lifters, and though seven hits were secured off him he kept them widely scattered and they netted but one little run.

The score:

Henderson	1	7	3
Paducah	6	6	3

Batteries—Morgan, Asher and Schissel; Brahe and Land.

ences, one in the score, which was not quite so large in their favor, and the other in the game itself, it being even more of a farce than the first one.

Lane, the little college pitcher, with the elegant newspaper (C.S.) reputation, opened the ball and in the very first inning he walked three men. Eckstone pitched the second while Miller, a Central league man from Evansville, who had volunteered his services, was warming up. When finally Miller did get in the box in the third inning he was pounded all over the park and seemed at all times to be at the mercy of the infants. Carnes pitched for the local bunch and kept his hits well scattered with the exception of one instance and even then the runs made by the visitors were not enough to cause the fans to feel even the slightest tremor.

Dunn the new catcher for Cairo, is a farce pure and simple. He allowed eight men to steal around on him and one stole home under his nose. Eddie Powers, who joined the team today, secured two hits out of three times up and played a fast game.

Second Game.

Cairo	3	8	2
Princeton	7	8	1

Batteries—Lane, Eckstone, Miller and Dunn; Carnes and Downing.

Vincennes, June 30.—In spite of their still crippled condition the Kolbits waded into the Nut Students yesterday and gathered the second game of the series from them. The game was decidedly interesting and was won by a close score.

Boylan, who was released by the Allee Men, twirled for the Students and was as wild as a March hare. Duggan pitched for the locals and as usual put up an elegant game, allowing but six hits which were well scattered.

Vincennes
 2 | 6 | 1 || Hopkinsville | 0 | 6 | 5 |

Batteries—Duggan and Forney; Boylan and Rutledge.

Vincennes has released Doan and Henderson "Policeman" Mike Mullin.

A Mr. Carmel, Ill., paper says of the Paducah-Vincennes game Sunday: "The game resulted in a score of 10 to 6 in favor of Vincennes, and if Sunday's game was a fair exhibition of their ball playing, the Mt. Carmel Indians could best either club without exerting themselves in the least."

Boylan was released yesterday by Vincennes to the Nut Students and the first game they had him he did his best to lose it to them by his wildness. Succeeded, too. From a special received last night from Captain Boland it seems that Fleming and Marre are the only ones of the new men on the team who are showing up. The games now are practically being played with four men and not a one of the recent acquisitions, outside of the one mentioned, is worth a continental. Cairo Bulletin.

Paducah Players Return.

"Dutch" Deeks and Eddie Brahe, the Paducah battery which left here several weeks ago to join the Cherokee Indian baseball team, returned home last night, having quit the team. It seems that the Paducah boys did not like the accommodations and this with the fact that the management intends to immediately secure Indians exclusively, made it impossible for them to remain. They met with success in their work, winning most of the games they played. The teams played against by the Indians were all fast independent teams and some Trolley League teams. Brahe and Deeks left the Indians at Buffalo, N. Y.

Boylan was given his release last night and will likely sign with Hopkinsville. Boylan has a splendid assortment of benches and is released to make roof for Bonno. Vincennes Capital.

EMPIRE'S LOT NO PLAY.

Players Will Kick at Devils Until Noon's Day.

"Kicking on decisions? You can invest the empire with the power of a Czar and surround him with a regiment of regulars to back him up, and there will be no let up," says Tim Hurd, the veteran arbitrator. "When there are eighteen men play hard to win a game, and it comes like him bang as a player goes to first you know there will be a kick. The empire should walk away and not pay any attention to such a little thing unless the players follow him up and attracts attention."

"The National League is just educating youngsters now for the Americans. About the same old bunch has been playing with the Americans for some ten years at the same pace they are going it now. With the Nationals about every one in three of their players is being taught the game, you know."

"Will the spitball stay with us? Well, it may last some arms, but in a pinch I guess the pitcher would kick it. Any way, you know there are always fools enough to keep at any thing like that, even if it is detrimental to their arms. However there is no trick of a pitcher that the batter won't get out and walk."

NO REWARD

CAN BE ISSUED FOR BORDEN'S
UNTIL THERE ARE CHARGES

Further Light On the $500 Bond Transaction—Comes Up Tomorrow.

J. S. Borden, former manager of the Home Purchasing company, has not yet been located and all talk about the government offering a reward for him is foolish, as there is no charge against him except a misdemeanor warrant in the police court, which probably would not justify any governor in turning him over to officers from this state should he be located somewhere else.

It is likely that nothing will be done until the books of the concern are straightened out and the treasury set their bearings. This will be sometime.

The question of who gets the $500 deposited with Chief of Police James Collins will be settled tomorrow by Judge Sanders. The money will undoubtedly be returned to W. A. O'Brien, the real estate man. The facts in the transaction seem to be that when Borden was arrested one night, he didn't want to go to the lockup and O'Brien, who was until recently in the Home Purchasing company, was sent for to go his bond. O'Brien declined unless Borden paid, and $500 worth of Home Purchasing company "exchange" wherever that is, was offered him. He refused to take it, and demanded that cash be deposited with him. Mr. R. R. Palmer, treasurer of the company, then produced $120 from his own pocket, and others put the remainder. The $500 was given to Mr. O'Brien who then gave his personal check for $500 as surety for Borden's appearance in court.

All Mr. O'Brien wants to do now is to protect himself. He has $500 belonging to someone, but whether to the Home Purchasing company or Mr. Palmer and the others is doubtful. He does not know. He is willing that a fight be waged over the $500 he holds, it is understood, but he wants his own $500 at the day he returned to him. If the court should order the $500 held by Chief Collins turned over to the Home Purchasing company receiver, Mr. Palmer and others who deposited money in Mr. O'Brien's hands could then come and demand it of Mr. O'Brien, claiming that the bond was not forfeited. Mr. O'Brien would not only then have his own $500, but would have no need to give up the $500 which had been deposited with him to indemnify him in case Borden forfeited his bond.

Prominent People Wed.

Paducah, Ky., June 30. At the home of the bride the marriage of Miss Stella E. White and Attorney Henry Perryman Smith was solemnized Wednesday, Rev. I. N. Strother officiating. The happy couple left for a month's stay in Michigan.

Mr. Smith is a son of the late Caleb Smith and for the past ten years he has been one of the most active members of the Paducah bar. He is commonwealth's attorney of the Third judicial district, and one of the most prominent young lawyers of Western Kentucky.

Miss White is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. White.

Events at Smithland.

Smithland, Ky., June 30. Several ugly wounds were inflicted upon John Snow's head and chest by Dallas McEllar, Millot, used a knife. One wound on the side of his face cut almost through. Another on the top of his head cut to the skull bone, and another in the chest reached to the hollow. Millot did not receive any hurt. Millot was paying Snow's daughter attention, objection to which caused the trouble. He will be given an examining trial Saturday before Judge Evans.

Death in Marshall.

Henton, Ky., June 30.—Casswell Cline, aged about 35 years, died of old age at his home near here. Mr. Cline was born and reared in Tennessee, moved to this county many years ago and raised a family of five children, all of whom are grown and living at home or on adjoining farms.

Death Near Fulton.

Fulton, Ky., June 30.—Miss Jane Nichols, age about 88 years, died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gates in the Rock Springs neighborhood.

Married Near Mayfield.

Mayfield, Ky., June 30. Mr. N. W. Harris and Miss Emma Clark were united in marriage at the home of the bride's mother. They will make their home near Brown's Grove.

Fire in Graves.

Mayfield, Ky., June 30.—The stable of Mr. E. M. Fleming, east of the city, was struck by lightning Wednesday morning and burned to the ground. The loss was 120 barrels of corn, 10,000 pounds of hay and one mare. There was no insurance.

For Mayor of Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., June 30.—J. T. O'Neal, a leading attorney and long prominent in Democratic politics, has agreed to make the race for mayor of Louisville, having been endorsed by the City club, an organization of citizens without regard to party, who accuse present Democratic administration of misrule and will support it at the polls this fall. In the destruction of principles the members of the club pledge themselves.

to work at the polls on November 7 next, to secure a fair and honest election, "leaving no just means unused, no honorable effort untaken to protect the ballot, and to prevent all fraud, intimidation and brutality which may be attempted at the polls." A non-partisan ticket of adherents has been recommended. The club has appointed a Confederate committee to confer with a like committee from the Republican party with a view to presenting a coalition ticket. The indications are that the municipal campaign will be the hottest ever known in the city of Louisville.

MAN LOCATE HERE.

Col. A. B. Woodard, of Tennessee, visiting in Paducah.

Col. A. B. Woodard and son, B. B. Woodard, of Fayetteville, Tenn., arrived last night with Attorney L. K. Taylor from Memphis, Tenn., where the latter has been for a few days on business.

Col. Woodard is one of Middle Tennessee's most prominent lawyers. He was the Democratic elector for the state at large in 1900 and was a close second in the Democratic race for governor with Henton McMillan in 1902. He is desirous of locating in a city to practice his profession and at Mr. Taylor's request came to investigate Paducah.

Daily Thought.

"The moment you harbor doubt and begin to lose faith in yourself, you capitulate to the enemy."

A DIFFERENCE IN CONDITIONS.

The correspondent sent by the Chicago Tribune to study the system of municipal ownership in Great Britain and on the continent, says the Nashville flanner, makes the following statement in one of his letters: "In no single city where municipal ownership has been studied at close range is there a system of municipal government which even approximates the opportunities for graft and political misrule common to American cities. Great Britain is a constitutional monarchy and France is a republic, and yet neither London nor Paris has a single executive municipal officer elected by the people. The president of the London County Council and the Prefect of the Seine, like the Burgomaster of Vienna and the Lord Provost of Glasgow, are independent of the people entirely."

Commenting on this, the Philadelphia Ledger says:

"The all-powerful ruler of Paris, the Prefect of the Seine, is appointed by the national authority, and in Glasgow and in other British cities with municipal ownership the managers of public utilities are chosen by committees of the Council and are far removed from the whims or intrigues of politics. The selection of managers of utilities by committees of Councils would not work well here under present conditions, but in Great Britain the results are good because the members of the Council are the most substantial and most respected members of the community which they represent, and positively beyond the breath of suspicion and scandal."

One of the reasons for the uniformly high character of the members of Councils, or, at any rate, one of the reasons why untrustworthy men cannot be readily elected to Councils, is found in the fact that the suffrage is limited to men with a stake in the community. A voter in Glasgow is either a householder or a householder or renter. There is positively no floating vote; the denizens of lodging-houses the colored voters, the dregs of humanity who are marshaled in gangs to stuff the ballot box—"who disgrace the American cities by their influence on local government"—have absolutely no voice in Scotland. Such a thing as a fraudulent vote is unheard of and unknown. The power which sways elections in some American cities is not present, and party politics does not enter into the question of municipal government.

lial government. "Not over half the adult males of Glasgow have the right of suffrage, and municipal ownership flourishes best in those cities where the suffrage is most restricted."

President Roosevelt, in his address at the annual dinner of Harvard University, urged a respect for and obedience to the law, on part of the rich as well as poor. Some people unfortunately seem to think the laws are for only the poor to obey, and vice versa. President Roosevelt has always tried to give all a square deal. His discussion of the laws as applied to people of all classes is timely. Our wealthy people, if they obeyed all the laws, would still be the target of the envious, the ignorant and the vicious, which would make their lot in some respects unpleasant under any circumstances. Therefore it behooves them to obey the strict letter of the law with more promptness and cheerfulness than it might the less fortunate, if they expect ever to diminish class hatred in America.

Evansville is preparing to let contracts for many blocks of new streets. Although asphalt has been used there for some time, and paving bricks are manufactured there and can be bought without the extra cost of freight, Evansville will in all probability use the bitulithic material. The Evansville Journal-News says of a discussion of material before the board of public works: "Mr. Elchel says bitulithic is the only paving material, in his opinion, and he believes it will outlast asphalt. It has been tested sufficiently in several cities, notably St. Louis, where the Evansville board of public works inspected the streets recently. Mr. Elchel accompanied the party and he says his earlier formed opinion about the merits of the patented paving material were only re-enforced."

A Democratic paper calls attention to the dismissal of Minister Bowen, and to the decision of the government not to prosecute Mr. Paul Morton for rebates alleged to have been made by a railroad, and asks "are these manifestations of a 'square deal'?" Most decidedly they are. Mr. Bowen was proven unfit for the diplomatic service, and out he went. Mr. Morton, it was shown, had nothing to do with rebates and it was giving him more than a "square deal" when it was decided he was not subject to prosecution for violations of law committed by others without his knowledge and sanction.

According to a new state law which will go into effect July 1 in Illinois, sheriffs will have to discharge their duty when a lynching is threatened. The law provides that if a lynching occurs the sheriff must immediately vacate his office and the coroner of the county will take his place. He must appear before a tribunal and if he can give a satisfactory showing that he did everything possible to prevent the lynching he may then petition to be reinstated. These sort of laws will do more towards abolishing lynchings than all the argument, preaching and prosecution imaginable.

The revolt of Russian sailors on one of the czar's warships, the murder of officers and the seizure of the vessel, are something unprecedented in modern history, and the result is yet to be determined. Whether this act of mutiny was occasioned by the brutality of the officers, the dissatisfaction of sailors with existing conditions, or simply the inherent tendency of many of the Russians to destroy their own government, cannot be told, but it is certain to call the attention of the czar to the dangers that beset him on every hand, not the least of which is the treachery of his own subjects.

A subscriber writes to one of the Louisville papers protesting against the concerted condemnation of Judge Hargis and his crowd in Breathitt county, and suggests that perhaps they are not as black as painted. They might not be, and would still be black enough. Judge Hargis has repeatedly defied the remainder of the state, and boasted that he would "do as he damned please," and thus far he has kept his word.

Some of the Ballard county papers are complaining because the primary fee is $100 to run for the democratic senatorial nomination in this district. We have known it to cost some democrats more than that to get into the legislature, but they got it all back before their terms expired.

Somebody ought to stop that practice over there in Norway. Nobody wants to see hantians right.

Women who are good cooks and tidy housekeepers seldom have occasion to waste time in a divorce court.

COURT OF APPEALS

Define the Rights and Duties of Automobileists.

There are a great many automobiles in Paducah, and a great many more doubtless coming, hence the attitude of the courts towards the vehicles is of general interest to the automobile as well as to the general public.

The Kentucky court of appeals, in a recent decision, has in a measure defined the rights of automobilists, and the remainder of the public, in the following decision:

"While automobiles are a lawful means of conveyance, and have equal rights upon the public roads, with horses and carriages, their use should be accompanied with that degree of prudence in management, and consideration for the rights of others, which is consistent with their safety. If as the jury found by their verdict, appellant knew or could have known by the exercise of ordinary care that the machine in his possession and under his control had so far excited appellate horse as to endanger him dangerous and unmanageable, it was his duty to have stopped his automobile, and taken such other steps for appellate safety as ordinary prudence might suggest."

Why He Was Sad.

"What's the matter, old man?" he said as they met the next morning after. "You look blue."

"I feel blue."

"The last night you were the jolliest member of our party."

"I felt jolly."

"You acted like a boy just let out of school."

"I felt like one."

"You said that your wife had gone away for the first time in three years and there wasn't any one to say a word if you went home and kicked over the unmet clock."

"I remember it."

"You said that if you stayed out until 4 o'clock there was no one to look at you reproachfully and sigh and make you feel mean."

"Yes, and I stayed out until 4 o'clock didn't I?"

"You certainly did."

"And I gave a war whoop on the front porch?"

"Yes, and you sang a verse from a comic opera song and tried to do a clog dance."

"Yes, and my wife missed that treat and didn't go. Now, please, go away and let me sorrow in silence."

House Habits.

There is a story of an old New England doctor who, on taking his evening walk that had not been used for some time, found that a hen was sitting in it. He merely "harassed" her without disturbing her, and he and his family made a series of calls. The Boston Herald offers this true story of the town of Amesbury, which owns a small fire apparatus:

Outside the fire house is a small community that, on petition, received an appropriation for the purchase of a "house cat." It was insisted by a "reformed" blacksmith shop, who remained for two years, used only for decorative purposes in street parades.

Last summer a stroke of lightning started a small fire in a farmhouse nearby. The volunteer department tried at once, but when they arrived at the engine house the fireman stood in the door.

"Don't touch her, boys," cried he. "I've got two lines settled in the box. Let's see 'em back."

"They agreed," and the boys were allowed to pursue their hobnobbing ways.

When Men Stay at Home.

It is surprising how soon a wife tires of the company of a man who is too much at home. Men are who in getting away from their roof trees a portion of each day. Among their wives will be found a very general opinion to this effect, says the Gentlewoman.

There will be found everywhere a disposition to mark men off in the morning and to let them keep out of the way till toward evening, when it is presumed that they will probably have a little news of the busy world to bring home and when they will be sure to have said something exceptionally brilliant and precocious. The general events of the day will afford topics of conversation more interesting by far than if the whole household had been together from morn till night. A very little inquiry, too, will elicit the fact that men about home all day are emphatically not to be trusted and grumpy and interfering altogether objectionable, in short.

The grand Fourth of July celebration at Metropolis will be held at Old Port Massaw, which has been converted into "The Massaw State Park," by the state of Illinois. A handsome program has been arranged for the day and attractive amusements will be furnished. The steamer George Cowling will make two special excursions, trips out of Paducah at 10 o'clock a. m. and at 2 p. m. Returning will leave Metropolis at 1 p. m. and 5 p. m. Round trip fare 25 cents. Boat will stop at the Park Landing going down and coming up.

No man who is not looking for trouble will attempt to argue with his wife while she is trying to arrange her hair in a new way.

H. F. Riddle, of Paducah, was released yesterday after being held a short time on complaint of Buck Mount, of Paducah, who claimed Riddle owed him money. Riddle settled everything satisfactorily and was released.

To Draw Up Judgment.

Judge James Campbell will go to Louisville tonight for the purpose of drawing up a judgment in the mortgage action in federal court against the People's Independent Telephone Co., here and the sale of the plant will immediately follow.

Judge Campbell anticipates that there will be more than one bidder on the plant and thinks it possible that other companies will try to secure it. The judgment will be drawn to enforce a lien held on the plant and it is presumed the Paducah Home Telephone Co. a newly incorporated company, will be the most interested bidder having organized to buy the local independent line, but the exchange had not been sold as yet by any means.

Benue Indictments.

The grand jury discharged in Judge Reed at Benton this week, during the 13 days in session returned 25 indictments, as follows: Grand larceny, 1; assault and battery, 1; housebreaking, 1; breach of peace, 3; disturbing public worship, 1; carrying pistol, 1; bootlegging, 1; selling liquor, 14.

Rule On County Clerk.

A rule has been received here from the Graves circuit court on County Clerk Charles Graham to appear not later than July 5 in the Graves County circuit court and show why he has not paid in taxes alleged to have been paid to him for the state in an action where land was sold and back taxes collected. The taxes were paid for one or more years, it is said, in Paducah. The style of the suit in which the claim is made is N. V. Gault and others, against Garle.

Police Court.

Two warrants against Ed Perkins were this morning returned on Monday in police court. Perkins is accused by James Taylor and Wood Jones of throwing clubs at them and cursing them. Taylor claims that Perkins ran him into the creek in Mechanismburg with a club while he merely threw the club at Jones, Jones getting out of reach.

Pretty Church Wedding Last Evening.

The marriage of Miss Clara Moore and Mr. Hume Ogilvie was solemnized last evening at the Trinity St. Methodist church in the presence of a large number of friends of the popular couple. It was an exceedingly pretty ceremonial. The church was attractively decorated with palms and ferns. Mrs. Ben Hillings presided at the organ playing the wedding march as the party entered. The only attendants were the ushers, Mr. Henry Moore, Mr. Robert Morrison, Mr. Richard Scott, Mr. Oscar Bank and Dr. William Owen and Mr. Aubrey Moore.

The bride, who is very attractive and handsome, looked especially so in a pretty gown of white organza over silk, with the bridal veil. Her bouquet was bride roses and ferns. She entered with her brother, Mr. Frank Moore, who gave her away. The groom entered with his best man, Mr. Clarence Milam. They were met at the altar by Bishop Henry Clay Morrison, of New Orleans, an uncle of the bride, who performed the ceremony in a most impressive way. The two rings were used in the betrothal and it was especially beautiful.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception was given the bridal party and immediate relatives at the home of Mrs. Martin Smith on North 7th street. The house was effectively decorated in white, pink, and green, and it was a very delightful occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvie went out last evening to their home Woodland Place, on the Highland road, where they will keep house. Mr. Ogilvie is a prominent young stock farmer in the county, and is the youngest son of the late Senator John W. Ogilvie of this district. His bride is of attractive personality and has been a leading teacher in the Paducah public schools. Both are popular socially, and have many friends in the city and county.

The Return of SHERLOCK HOLMES

HOLMES had been seated for some hours in silence, with his long, thin back curved over a chemical vessel in which he was brewing a particularly malarious product. His head was sunk upon his breast, and he looked from my point of view like a strange, bird-like figure with dull gray plumage and a black topknot.

"So, Watson," said he suddenly, "you do not propose to invest in South Africa securities?"

I gave a start of astonishment. Accustomed as I was to Holmes' curious faculties, this sudden intrusion into my most intimate thoughts was utterly inexplicable.

"How on earth do you know that?" I asked.

"He wheeled round upon his stool with a steaming test tube in his hand and a gleam of amusement in his deep-set eyes.

"Now, Watson, confess yourself utterly taken aback," said he.

"Why?"

"Because in five minutes you will say that it is all so absurdly simple."

"I am sure that I shall say nothing of the kind."

"You see, my dear Watson," he propounded his test tube in the rack and began to lecture with the air of a professor addressing his class. "It is not really difficult to construct a series of inferences, each dependent upon its predecessor and each simple in itself. If after doing so, one simply knocks out all the central inferences and presents one's audience with the starting point and the conclusion, one may produce a startling though possibly a meretricious effect. Now, it was not really difficult by an inspection of the ground between your left forefinger and thumb to feel sure that you did not propose to invest your small capital in the gold fields."

"I see no connection."

"Very likely not, but I can quickly show you a close connection. Here are the missing links of the very simple chain. First, you had chalk between your left finger and thumb when you returned from the club last night; second, you put chalk there when you play billiards to steady the cue; third, you never play billiards except with Thurston; fourth, you told me four weeks ago that Thurston had an option on some South African property which he desired you to share with him; fifth, your cheek book is locked in my drawer, and you have not asked for the key; sixth, you do not propose to invest your money in this manner."

"How absurdly simple!" I cried.

"Quite so," said he, a little nettled. "Every problem becomes very childish when once it is explained to you. Here is an unexplained one. See what you can make of that, friend Watson!"

He tossed a sheet of paper upon the table and turned once more to his chemical analysis.

I looked with amusement at the absurd hieroglyphics upon the paper.

"Why, Holmes, it is a child's drawing!" I cried.

"Oh, that's your idea?"

"What else should it be?"

"That is what Mr. Hilton Child of Biding Thorpe Manor, Norfolk, is very anxious to know. Tell him, please, that I should not be very much surprised if this were he."

A heavy step was heard upon the stairs, and an instant later there came a knock at the door. Watson, who had been waiting for me, opened the door and told me that the lady who had drawn them, but the lady swore he knew nothing about it. Anyhow, they had come there during the night. I had them washed out, and I only mentioned the matter to my wife afterward. To my surprise she took it very seriously and begged me if any more came to let her see them. None did come for a week, and then yesterday morning I found this paper lying on the sundial in the garden. I showed it to Elsie, and down she dropped in a dead faint. Since then she has looked like a woman in a dream, half dazed and with terror always lurking in her eyes. It was then that I wrote and sent the paper to you, Mr. Holmes. It was not a thing that I could take to the police, for they would have laughed at me, but you will tell me what to do. I am not a rich man, but if there is any danger threatening my little woman I must spend my last copper to shield her.

He was a fine creature, this man of the old English salt-stomped, straight and gentle, with his great, earnest blue eyes and broad, comely face. His love for his wife and his trust in her shone in his features. Holmes had listened to his story with the utmost attention, and now he sat for some time in silent thought.

"Don't you think, Mr. Child," said he at last, "that your best plan would be to make a direct appeal to your wife and to ask her to share her secret with you?"

Hilton Child shook his massive head. "A promise is a promise, Mr. Holmes. If Elsie wished to tell me she would. If not, it is not for me to force her confidence. But I am justified in taking my own line—and I will."

"Then I will help you with all my heart. In the first place, have you heard of any strangers being seen in your neighborhood?"

"No."

"I presume that it is a very quiet place. Any fresh face would cause comment?"

"In the immediate neighborhood, yes. But we have several small watering places not very far away. And the farmers take in lodgers."

"These hieroglyphics have evidently a meaning. If it is a purely arbitrary one it may be impossible for us to solve it. If, on the other hand, it is systematic, I have no doubt that we shall get to the bottom of it. But this particular sample is so short that I can do nothing, and the facts which you have brought me are so indefinite that we have no basis for an investigation. I would suggest that you return to Norfolk, that you keep a keen lookout and that you take an exact copy of any fresh dancing men which may appear. It is a thousand pities that we have not a reproduction of those which were done in chalk upon the window sill. Make a discreet inquiry also as to any strangers in the neighborhood. When you have collected some fresh evidence come to me again. That is the best advice which I can give you, Mr. Hilton Child. If there are any pressing fresh developments I shall be always ready to run down and see you in your Norfolk home."

The interview left Sherlock Holmes very thoughtful, and several times in the next few days I saw him take his slip of paper from his notebook and look long and earnestly at the curious figures inscribed upon it. He made no allusion to the affair, however, until one afternoon a fortnight or so later I was going out when he called me back.

"You had better stay here, Watson."

"Why?"

"The more haste men make for happiness the less intimate acquaintances they get with it."

Weak Stomach.

A weak stomach is most frequently caused by the overworked and exhausted nervous system.

The power that runs the stomach is the nerve force sent to it from the brain through the nerves. When the nerves are weak or exhausted the supply of energy is insufficient and the action of the stomach is impaired, and results in imperfect digestion—dyspepsia.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve increases nerve force. It strengthens and builds up nerve tissue, gives vigor to the nerves and muscles of the stomach; this produces a healthy activity.

Nerve allays the inflammation, heals the membranes, and makes the stomach strong and healthy. There is nothing that so quickly gives energy to the whole system as Restorative Nerve.

"I can't say enough for Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve. I feel that I will do for others but I certainly cured my own stomach trouble, and now I am as well as I ever was. You physicians failed to relieve me, but in three or four days after taking Nerve I was much relieved. Four bottles made me a sound man, at the cost of $4.00."

JAMES E. BAILEY, Detroit, Mich.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

The Atavism Of Pauline

By INA WRIGHT HANSON

Copyright, 1908, by the Wright-Hanson

It was sunny where we sat at Sairo heights, between the white statues of "Prometheus" and "Panthea on Herpeton." At our left stretched a smooth red road.

"The road of love, and it leads to paradise," I remarked.

Pauline was silent. Her dreamy eyes gazed beyond the little waves lagging in toward shore out to the bank of fog which circled the waters, as if to shut us two, there in the sunshine, away from the whole world. My glance lingered on Pauline's rippling brown hair, on her straight little nose, on her mouth, and I gave one long sigh of content.

"Pauline," I said, "will you marry me?"

"No," she answered.

Her tone was earnest, but it held uncompromising firmness. The fog was coming closer in.

"Why?"

Pauline turned her gray eyes from the ocean to me.

"One thing thou lackest," she quoted softly. "To sell what thou hast and give to the poor."

I stared blankly at her. Was this child of luxury, this butterfly of fashion, turning preacher?

"I don't say it's original, Elbert. For generations back there's been every now and then some one of our family who has believed and practiced it. I suppose the mantle of these peculiar ancestors has fallen upon me, for it has been a life principle with me."

"Maybe I'm dense, but I confess I don't see."

"I have more money than I know what to do with; so have you. It is absurd for us to marry and put all our money together. It isn't right. You must choose some poor girl and I a penniless man."

"Nonsense!"

"I really mean it."

I reasoned with her for an hour and at the end of the time I left her looking at the ocean, her eyes wet, but her chin determined. Her chauffeur looked at me inquiringly as I strode past her auto car, which had brought us both. I jammed my hat down viciously and started along the red road, but it no longer led to paradise. It was no "road of love" and there was no paradise anywhere.

"And the young man went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions."

It's amazing what a good night's sleep will do for a man. Next morning I had an interview with my lawyer. It was tedious and somewhat embarrassing, as I had to explain some things I should have preferred to keep to myself. It was over at last and I sought Pauline.

I found her in the rose garden, writing rapidly. When she saw me she sprang up, scattering her papers on the grass. She smiled at me tearfully.

"I discovered that I couldn't live without you," I said, taking her into my arms. "I could have given away a dozen fortunes rather than lose you."

"I felt her start."

"Given away, Elbert," she repeated. "You haven't given away?"

"Every cent," I cried gayly, leading her to a seat. "Just got the business dashed. I'm your penniless man. Now when will you marry me?"

She stared at me, her eyes round and amazed. Then she laughed nervously.

"I have, too," she gasped.

"Have what, darling?" I queried.

"Given everything away. I was just writing to you to tell you that I cared more for you than for my wretched money; and it's all gone, gone, gone!"

"Never mind, little girl. We have each proved our love. Now we will start in and live as our grandparents did. I will buy a ranch!"

"My grandparents didn't, and you haven't any money, Elbert!"

"Oh, that's so. Well, I will go and work for a rancher, then, and you can help the rancher's wife. You can make butter and feed the hens and—fatten the pigs, can't you?"

She held up her little white hands, and I covered them with kisses. Then she put them, one on each side of my face, and looked steadily into my eyes.

"Elbert, I will try if the rancher's wife will have patience with me."

"To whom did you give your fortune?" I asked after a minute.

"To the church for an orphanage."

Her lips were quivering again, so I said hastily.

"Well, sweetheart, go put on your plainest gown, us beats a poor man's bride, and we will go at once to the parsonage."

I laughed when she came back. Her "plainest gown" was simple and white, but probably cost as much as I could earn on the ranch in a year.

"The minister lent me the money for the license and has promised to wait till I get my first month's wages for that and his fee," I explained as we walked along.

Pauline's face flushed and she looked up pitifully.

"Didn't you save out enough for the ring and wedding ring?" she whispered.

"Made a clean sweep of everything," I answered cheerfully, "except my clothes. I didn't think my—er—beneficiary would care for those."

She gave a patient sigh.

"You will get me a ring as soon as you can, won't you, Elbert? I don't feel married without a wedding ring."

"Sure, little girl," I answered huskily as we reached the parsonage.

When my wife and I emerged from the minister's gate I looked at her in quirkily.

"Well," I said, "probably we had better start at once for the country."

My small wife passed her hand with a charming assumption of dignity.

"Indeed, we shall not. We will go home until such time as we choose to go. The church can wait till we are quite ready to depart."

"That evening as we sat in the rose garden we were joined by Mr. Layton, Pauline's lawyer.

"May I inquire as to your plans for the future?" asked the lawyer.

"We are going to the country to find work," Pauline began bravely. "You see, Elbert did just what I did gave his money away. He came here to tell me, and I was willing to him. Wasn't it a funny coincidence?"

"Very," said the lawyer dryly.

My wife folded and unfolded her handkerchief. The lawyer gazed into space. Pauline sighed, and Mr. Layton cleared his throat.

"And you expect to enjoy drudgery instead of luxury, do you?" he asked, with the suspicion of a growl.

"It isn't a matter of liking," Pauline answered quietly. "Elbert did it because he loved Elbert and I thought it was right. Of course neither of us thought of the other's sacrificing. But it is done, and we are going to make the best of it."

"I see. Would it disappoint you too much if your property were all lost?"

Pauline gasped.

"I thought you'd be sorry, so I made up the message from the church. As the church doesn't know what she missed, she will be able to endure it."

Pauline gave a joyful cry. "Oh, Elbert, I needn't wait a month for my wedding ring!"

"My wife buy her own wedding ring?" I asked fondly, wishing the lawyer were in Mexico for a moment.

"No; I'll have my property made over to you, dear."

Mr. Layton turned to me. "May I inquire, sir, to whom you made over your property? Was yours given to charity also?"

"I didn't think so at the time I did it," I responded snuggly. "It is in the name of Pauline Mowbray, spinster. I suppose her subsequent marriage!"

Pauline's face was close to mine. "You precious, old, deceitful goose!" she said.

If Mayor Doesn't Have Himself Arrested for Breaking the Peace Is He a Perjuror?

In a mayor who takes the oath of office and swears to obey and obey the laws and see that they are enforced and then gets out and has a "scene" with somebody on the public square, and doesn't have himself arrested and fined for disorderly conduct, a perjurer in the eyes of the law?

This is one of the questions that will be brought up at the trial of Editor A. M. Palmer of the Mound City Sun, who is being sued by Mayor M. F. Browner for libel.

The other question is whether he had a "scene" that was just cause for the long article in Mr. Palmer's paper claiming that Mound City was "mayorless" and that the man who is holding that job was a perjurer.

The defendant was placed under a bond of $200 and the trial set for September 1.—Cairo Bulletin.

CURES OLD SORES.

Westmoreland, Kans., May 5, 1902. Ballard's Snow Liniment Co.: Your Snow Liniment cured an old sore on the side of my chin that was supposed to be a cancer. ## STREET CONTRACT

WILL PROBABLY BE AWARDED THIS AFTERNOON AT 4

The Material Will Probably Be Bitulite or Asphalt, It Is Understood.

The board of public works will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock to open bids for paving 22 blocks of street—Jefferson, Kentucky, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th.

There are a number of contractors here, in addition to representatives of concerns furnishing material of various kinds. Among them are:

Mr. G. M. Ingram, president of Nashville Roading and Paving Co., and the Southern Bitulite Co.
Mr. McNulty, Barber Asphalt Co.
Mr. Wheeler, representing Blakey Asphalt Maintenance Co.

Mr. James Farley, manager of J. J. Farley Co., of Homer, Ill.
Mr. Harry Baldwin, of the Anchor Paving Co.

Thomas Bridges and Son, represented by Mr. Thos. Bridges.
Katterjohn Construction Co.

It is expected that there will be four bids, at least. It is likely the board of works will recommend bitulite material.

A member of the general council, which will ratify or reject the contract, said today that either "bitulite or asphalt paving would be accepted."

Pitcher Bill Frakes, of the Paducah team, has gone to his home near Clarksville on account of illness.

TOBACCO NEWS.

332 Hogsheds Were Sold Here This Week.

The weekly report of Tobacco Inspector Ed. R. Miller is as follows: Receipts week, 349 hogsheds; receipts year, 3,998 hogsheds; offerings week, 356 hogsheds; offerings year, 3,320 hogsheds; rejections week, 57 hogsheds; private sampling week, 4 hogsheds; private sales week, 53 hogsheds; sales week, 332 hogsheds; sales year, 3,149 hogsheds.

The local tobacco market this week shows continued heavier receipts with large sales and strong prices. The tobacco sold on the breaks was mostly of medium to good leaf, there being a few hogsheds of low leaf or lugs offered.

The sale on the loose floor for the week were about 75,000 pounds, these offerings being also mostly of the medium to better grade of leaf. Prices ruled strong at last quotations.—Hopkinsville New Era.

Mr. H. A. Fruitema, formerly of Amsterdam, Holland, but now of Murray, Ky., is in the city on a visit to relatives, says the Nashville Banner. He is in the tobacco business and is an independent operator, owning two factories. One operated at Murray, Ky., and the other at Beaton, Ky., and while for a number of years Mr. Fruitema shipped the products of his factories across the waters, he said today that he preferred to sell on the market in Louisville, Clarksville, Hopkinsville and Paducah.

THE LONG LANE

[Copyright, 1906, by T. C. McClure.]
The room was unlighted save for the fire on the hearth, which snapped and crackled and sent weird, distorted shadows about the walls.

Barrington sat near the fire, which lighted his heavy features dimly and showed plainly the drawn, hard lines about his mouth. Barbara Allen had withdrawn to the shadows of a far corner and divided her time between a playful Angora kitten and covert glances in the young man's direction. Now and again as his brows knit in an angry frown she smiled knowingly as she smoothed the kitten's silky coat.

Presently the young man whirled about in his chair and glared into the gloom of the corner where the girl's face was but barely visible.

"I suppose," said he, with bitter sarcasm, "that I should have known from the beginning where we would come out with this little affair of ours. I suppose I should have taken warning from the countless predecessors who have tempted fate before me. But a man in love is blind to many things, and I find I've been no exception to this general rule."

The girl in the corner bent over the kitten, but made no reply. Barrington kicked back an ember which lurched from the fire and continued:

"I didn't think you were that sort of a girl. I fondly imagined, in my blessed innocence, that you had some spirit of fairness. I find I've been mistaken—and more."

"Be careful, Fritz," she said warningly. "You're saying some rather harsh things."

He laughed roughly. "It's hardly the time to mince matters," said he. "I'm well aware that the truth isn't always pleasant to hear, but I think you'll admit there are times when circumstances warrant its utterance. You have known from the first that I was honest and sincere. You knew I was no trifler. You might at least have let me know from the outset that my case was hopeless instead of dragging it on in this wretched fashion."

The girl sighed patiently. "I've merely tried to be nice—in a friendly way," she protested.

"Oh, you've succeeded admirably," said he. "You've been very, very nice. It was necessary to do that to keep me in line, I suppose."

"Kindly be a trifle considerate," she said coldly.

"Do you deserve consideration?" he asked.

"Perhaps not," she said, with a meekness that flamed the fires of his wrath. "I tell you," he declared, "it's a dangerous game you play, and some time it will go against you. There'll come a time when the glove will be on the other hand. It's a long lane that has no turning."

The rapid succession of metaphors set her smiling again. She leaned forward in her chair.

"And at the turn of the lane—what then?" she asked.

He frowned savagely at the fire.

"At the turn of the lane," said he, "you'll see it all from my present perspective. You'll know what it is to love honestly—only to provoke laughter."

She stroked the kitten thoughtfully.

"Fritz," she said, with a little note of awe—whether real or mocking, he could not decide—in her voice, "you frighten me."

"It will come," he said flatly.

He rose and picked up his hat and coat. He loomed up tall and forbidding in the flickering twilight.

"I'm going now," he said, "but before I do I want to ask a favor of you. Don't treat the next chap as you've treated me."

Barbara rose too. She spilled the kitten on to the floor and came over to Barrington's side.

"We're friends, aren't we?" she asked anxiously.

"Yes, we're friends," he said.

"You won't forget me because of this—you won't let this be a barrier between us?" she asked.

He looked down at her and smiled slowly.

"We'll be friends," he said emphatically.

The truth of the situation dawned on her suddenly. It left her a trifle dismayed.

"You don't mean you're not coming here again? You don't mean you'll avoid me?" she asked.

"I think it is the only way to insure our friendship," said he.

"Oh," she said in sudden contrition. He drew himself up with an effort.

"Well, goodbye," he said, holding out his hand.

The girl seemed not to notice it. She leaned against a chair.

"Goodbye!" he said again.

"Don't—don't go—like this," she said in entreaty.

He looked at her questioningly, then staid to the door.

"Don't go!" she whispered weakly.

He turned. "Why not?" he demanded abruptly.

She flushed and hesitated. She saw it was too late to retreat.

"Well," she said, looking into the fire, "there's a turn in the lane, you know, and I think we've reached it now, Fritz, dear."

THE FATE OF ODESSA

IS STILL IN DOUBT

death by killing all the officers.

As the news spread large crowds, consisting mainly of riotous strikers and their following, flocked to the quay and passed with bared heads, respectfully saluting the dead. The police, supported by Cossacks, tried to disperse the crowd and remove the body but the crowd surrounded the coffin and defied them to touch it. Before there was a definite result the Kaluz Potemkin Tavritchesky hoisted signals that the body was to be left on the quay; that it would be reinterred on board later for burial at sundown with full naval honors, and that if the authorities interfered the battleship would immediately bombard the city. This threat, emphasized by the sight of the muzzle of the ship's 12-inch guns leveled at the port, had its effect. The police and troops were called off, and the coffin remained surrounded by the sympathizing, angry crowd.

Meanwhile the battleship was rapidly coaling from the Esperanza, while the authorities conferred on how to act. The governor telegraphed to St. Petersburg and Sevastopol, asking the authorities at the latter place to send a fleet. It was evident that the authorities realized their helplessness. Any attempt at force would have undoubtedly led to a realization of the mutineers' threat to bombard the city. Moreover, there is reason to believe they distrusted the loyalty of the troops; therefore, beyond posting strong guards at the government offices, banks and other public buildings, the officials could do little to protect the town or ally the panic which seized a large proportion of the inhabitants.

There is but one officer of the Potemkin alive, and he is a mere lad, a midshipman, who was spared in order that he might navigate the battleship into port. Every other officer was killed on the quarter deck in a mutiny that flamed into being like an exploding shell, but which is now believed to have been ordered a month or more ago. The crew of 637 men is under the command of a self-elected leader, serving only the red flag under which he sailed into Odessa port. Never before has such a situation developed in any country.

In order to enforce this proclamation and show it to be no mere futile threat, he sent a 12-inch shell into the center of a detachment of Cossacks in the boulevard just as they were charging a mob of the townspeople. The shell struck with a precision that would have saved Rojstvensky's deer had such gunnery mark of his fight. A score of mangled bodies in Cossack uniforms were picked up from the ground by their terrified fellows. Of these four were dead, the others so badly injured that there is little hope for them.

The mob ashore and the mutineers in the harbor are acting in concert, and the red flag of revolt will be planted throughout southern Russia within a few days if their plans are carried out. The rest of the Black sea fleet is expected, and conjecture hardly does the task of foretelling what may result. Never has such a situation been faced by any set of government officials in the history of the world. It may be that the Russian commanders of the other vessels of the fleet may be able to hold their men together, and then will follow the strange and weirdly incredible spectacle of these ill-fated ships of the czar training their guns upon a battleship of their own navy.

More Serious Than Army Defeats.

St. Petersburg, June 20.—More serious in its possible effects than all the defeats in Manchuria or the destruction of Rojstvensky's fleet was the news that the standard of open rebellion was hoisted on board one of the battleships in the harbor of Odessa, and that, with shotted guns, the mutinous crew, headed by eight officers, was holding the ship against all comers.

The Black sea squadron, which left Sevastopol Tuesday under command of Vice Admiral Kruger, is due to arrive at Odessa and a battle with the mutineers may occur at any moment. The Kaluz Potemkin is a more powerful ship than any in Kruger's squadron, and the gravity of the situation is increased by the fact that the city is practically in the possession of the strikers. Should the sailors of Kruger's ships join the mutineers the government would have to face open revolution, which would spread like wildfire to other towns in the Black sea littoral.

No better evidence of the spirit of the crews is needed than an official announcement made by the admiral, that Admiral Nebogatoff and the other officers who surrendered in the sea of Japan would have to stand trial by court-martial upon their return. Practically all the crews of the vessels which surrendered came from the Black sea.

News of the mutiny, coming just at this time, when Poland is in a state of ferment, when agrarian disorders are coming to a head, and when the government is attempting mobilization involving about 200,000 men, may easily precipitate a crisis.
